

New Year - New Name

Big "Blind Dog" Mayer was known as Florian "Bluesman" Meyer in the blues-rock-scene since the year 2001.

In 2009, bluesman fell ill by a heavy viral infection in the eye area, which ultimately gave him blind in one side within 3 weeks. After a difficult eye operation specialists succeeded to restore him his eyesight relatively.

Despite a long rehabilitation time bluesman still struggling with the consequences of the disease and has literally every day the "Blues". For the year 2011 Bluesman finally decided to get a "gimmick" which adapted the international blues scene.

Bluesman has reinvented by itself and works from 2011 in the blues-rock scene as Big "Blind Dog" Mayer. Last but not least, the new artist name has its deeper Originating in the more recent medical history and the fact that "Blind Dog" the new "gimmick" now really can live and embody by his stature and voice.

His distinctive values, the black flat cap, his harmonica necklace and the often seen leather vest, are expanded in the future because of its Glare sensitivity of the eyes by a dark sunglasses.

So he embodies not only the common "blues cliché" with its Appearance, but also lives the blues daily, which is so loved and appreciated by his Audience. He and his music are characterized by its authenticity and robustness and inspire his enthusiastic audience each time from new.

A new old well known blues musician will be giving everything from 2011! With new fitting name and logo like the proverbial "chalk and cheese".
